

Liverpool Mercury

Monday, November 18, 1867

THE CHINESE AND MALAY PIRATES. — The United States steamer Maumee sailed on the evening of the 4th November for China and Japan. She is a light draught screw steamer, carrying six guns, and is destined to pursue the piratical crafts up the small inlets and into the narrow bays which, on the East India coast, have heretofore afforded such excellent shelter for the Chinese and Malay pirates infesting those seas. The commander of the Maumee, Lieutenant Cushing, is well selected. His daring exploits during the rebellion, including the blowing up of the rebel ram Albemarle, indicate that the pirates may expect some hot work.—New York Herald.